Tom was taken back to bed and calmed down after his sleep-walking incident.

As she entered the room, Tom was gradually waking up.

The day was spent packing his things to go home, but he had no enthusiasm for it at all.

Aunt Gwen thought he was having a nightmare, and she thought it was good that he would be going home the next day to be with his family again.

It was pitch dark but Tom could just feel his way through the garden because he knew it so well.
