He pushed the side of his body against the door, feeling very determined and focused.

He wanted to explore other parts of the garden that he couldn't get access to because the doors were locked.

The following night, he was shocked when he looked out and saw the fir tree standing firmly in its place.

He was standing in an orchard, beyond which, there were meadows and trees, and he could even see the rooves of what must be a village in the distance.

One time he saw a movement, a window opened and the maid shook out her duster.
